VI I believe that Africa has significant potential for development thanks to its vast size and large young population. First of all, this map makes it very clear how large Africa is compared with some of what most people consider large countries of the world. This implies people in Africa can make the most use of its large land. For example, they can use it to develop large-scale agriculture. Moreover, the graph shows us the demographic situation in most of Africa, with a very large percentage of young people. The abundant labor force in the future will be beneficial for the economy.
